

Welcome to Salem!

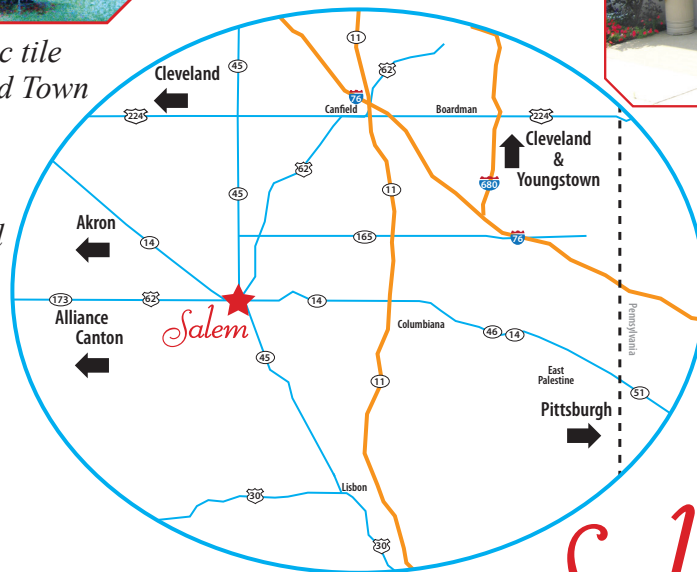

It is a great place to live and work.

Getting around our historic city is a pleasant experience, with schools, stores, restaurants, and parks only a few minutes drive from anywhere in the city. Walking and bicycling are especially easy thanks to the flattening effects of a glacier that stopped just south of the city limits about 20,000 years ago.

Salem's proximity to metropolitan areas provides an ideal blend of small-town life with access to big city amenities. Within 60 miles of Salem is Pittsburgh to the east and Cleveland to the northwest. Closer still are Youngstown, 25 miles to the north; Akron, 43 miles to the west; and Canton, 32 miles to the Southwest.

Salem's History

The story of Salem begins in 1803, the same year Ohio became a state. In that year, sturdy members of the Society of Friends (the Quakers) came west from Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and New Jersey to settle in what is known today as Salem, Ohio.

One of the early settlers named Zadok Street left Salem, New Jersey, and upon arrival to the area, purchased a section of land and envisioned its possibilities as a town. Co-founder, John Straughan, (later shortened to Strawn), joined Street in plotting and naming the future community Salem which means “peace” in Hebrew.

Founded on April 30, 1806, many of Salem’s early residents placed great value on human life regardless of race or gender, thus immersing Salem into the abolition and women’s rights movements of the 19th century.

The Western Headquarters for the Anti-Slavery Association was in Salem. The association published and distributed The Anti-Slavery Bugle newspaper from here. Salem was also a stop on the Underground Railroad, which gave food and shelter to many fugitive slaves on their way to Canada and freedom. Many of the stately homes on Salem’s main streets served as “stations” with secret rooms and other hiding places to conceal runaway slaves until they could be moved safely along the network to freedom.

The Hicksite Meeting House was the site of the first women’s suffrage convention in Ohio. It was held on April 19 and 20, 1850, two years after the first women’s rights convention was held by another group of Quakers in Seneca Falls, New York. This location was chosen as the meeting place because of the many Quakers living here, all believers in liberty of conscience.

Following the Civil War, manufacturing grew in Salem. By the turn of the century, Deming Co. pumps, the W.H. Mullins Co.’s metal products, and Salem China Company’s dishware were building the company’s reputation as the source of well-made durable goods.

The history of Salem has been rich and varied. Another example of the progressiveness of the community is that Salem is the second city in the nation to install an electric trolley with overhead wires. Similar forward thinking is evident today in the innovative products made here, and in the high quality education and services available to residents.

Schools

Salem's public school system includes three buildings for elementary school age children:

Buckeye School at 1200 Buckeye Avenue for kindergarten through second grade; Reilly School at 491 Reilly Avenue for grades three and four; and Southeast School at 2200 Merle Road for grades five and six.

The Salem Junior & Senior High School share the building at 1200 East Sixth Street. The facilities include up-to-date science labs, computer rooms, a wood shop, a metal shop, band and choir rooms, large gymnasium with weight room, and a recently renovated auditorium. In addition to honors classes, the Salem High School offers 13 Advanced Placement courses, the largest number of the rigorous, college credit courses provided by any high school in the Mahoning Valley.

Information for Salem Schools can be located at www.salemquakers.org

St. Paul School at 925 East State Street has offered a Catholic faith-based education since 1904. The school currently enrolls students from pre-school through grade six.
www.stpaulsalem.org

There are more than a dozen pre-schools and day care centers with various options to meet busy families' needs.

The city has the good fortune to host two sites of the Kent State University. The first is a Salem regional campus: a picturesque, 100-acre campus at 2491 State Route 45, three miles south of the city. The second is the Kent State City Center at 230 North Lincoln Avenue near the center of downtown Salem. Several thousand students use the facilities each year in their pursuit of associate's and bachelor's degree programs. The recent multi-million dollar addition of a Health and Science wing at the Route 45 South building has centralized classrooms and labs for growth in the nursing, radiologic, and imaging sciences programs.

★ Industry

The Business Community

Salem has been a center for manufacturing since its founding in 1806. More than 75 manufacturing and industrial service firms currently operate in the city and surrounding area.

Salem-made products include ham and bacon, molded plastics, electric furnaces, pumps, rolling steel mill components, hydraulic valves, plumbing fixtures, car and truck parts; furniture, machine tools and dies, wood and coal stoves, labeling equipment, newspapers, aluminum sign blanks, corrugated boxes, vehicle ramps and jacks.

Transportation

Salem is bisected by highways—U.S. 62, State Routes 14, 45, and 9—that provide business travelers and cargo transporters with easy access to the interstate highway system via I-76, I-80, I-90, or State Route 11, known as the Lake-to-River Freeway, seven miles to the east of Salem.

Access to Ohio's inland river system is also possible via the Ohio River, 30 miles to the south, and Lake Erie, 70 miles to the north.

Norfolk & Southern and Conrail trains make railroad transportation an option for moving goods and supplies.

Salem's proximity to three commercial airports—Greater Pittsburgh International, Cleveland International, Akron-Canton Airport—put global markets within reach.

The city's 145-acre industrial park has more than 40 lots available for new and expanding businesses. Interested parties are encouraged to contact Mike Mancuso, executive director of the Sustainable Opportunity Development Center. (330) 337-7669.

★ Churches

Since Salem's founding by members of the Religious Society of Friends, also known as Quakers, faith-based activities have been an integral part of the city. Today, Salem's faith community includes more than 30 Christian congregations.

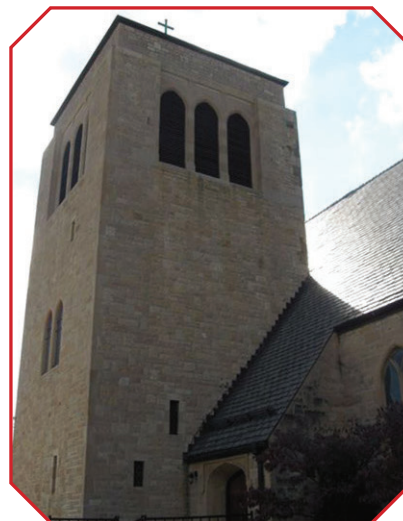

Ecumenical efforts to serve the community are led by the Salem Ministerial Association. In recent years, the Ministerial Association has been instrumental in the development of:

The Banquet In Salem – It provides free meals every Monday and the fourth Thursday of each month in the Memorial Building at 785 East State Street.

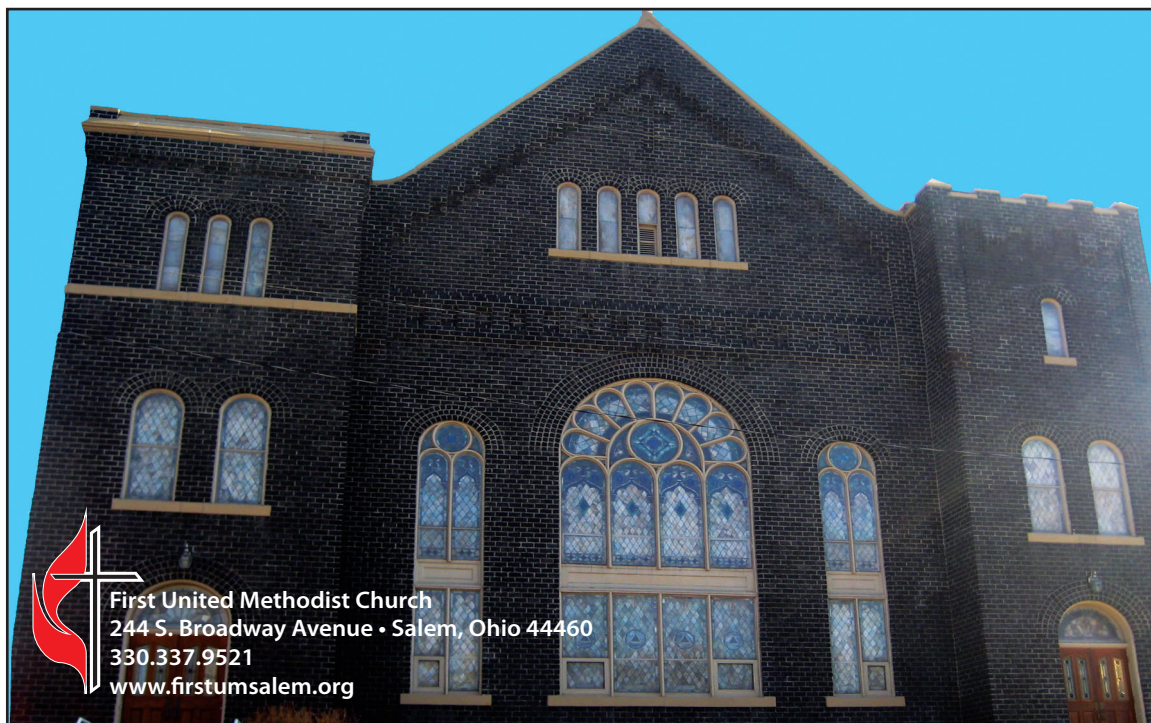

The Salem Community Pantry Inc. – It provides canned goods and perishable food to needy residents of the 44460 zip code from its facility at 794 East Third Street, at the corner of Vine Avenue.

Museums and Performing Arts

Salem's deep appreciation of local history and culture shines through residents' support of three museums, a community theater, and a community band and concert series.

The Salem Historical Society Museum and Freedom Hall at 208 South Broadway Avenue contains hundreds of special artifacts that document the city's history since its founding in 1806. Salem residents' involvement in the abolition and women's rights movements of the 1800s, and their ongoing industriousness are evident in the many displays throughout its four buildings. The most recent addition to the society's facilities is the Dale Shaffer Research Library. It opened in 2012 and honors local historian Dale Shaffer.

The Burchfield Homestead Museum provides visitors with unique insights into the creative process of watercolorist Charles Burchfield. Burchfield resided in the house at 867 East Fourth Street from 1898, when he was five years old, until 1921, when he married and moved to New York. The hundreds of paintings he created in the house as a young adult are among his most famous works. Burchfield used Salem's environs for inspiration throughout his long artistic career.

Burchfield Homestead Museum

The Salem Storybook Museum provides children and adults with the opportunity to experience fine art and notable books from children's literature. It is located within the Kent State University City Center at 230 North Lincoln Avenue.

Salem Community Theatre has offered live theatrical performances since 1977.

In addition to its regular season of plays and musicals, the stage at 490 East State Street serves as a venue for live music and comedy shows, and theater arts classes.
